M'KANE IS SOLEMN.

The Gravesend Ozar's Trial Formally Begun This Morning.

Prosecutor Shepard's Opening Address a Forcible Statement.

He is Entirely Satisfied with the Men in the Jury Box.

The real business of trying John Y. McKane on the indictment charging him with unlawfully aiding, abetting and procuring the election inspectors of the First District of Gravesend to concent the registration lists from public inspection during the last election, was begun in earnest this morning before Justice Willard Bartlett in the Brooklyn Court of Oyer and Terminer.

There was considerable talk before court opened about the rumor that Denmis Reardon, the eighth juror, might be unseated on account of his acquaintance with Patrick Ross, the grand-stand contractor, who figured prominently in the Brooklyn Columbus Day scandals.

This fact came out on his preliminary examination, but the prosecution account of the procession Brooklyn Columbus Day scandals.
This fact came out on his preliminary examination, but the prosecution accepted him, despite his admission that he lived in the same house with Ross. Lawyer Shepard said, however, that there had been no suspicion whatever of Mr. Reardon's eligibility, and remarked that it would be a good thing if every man in the box was as competent as in believed Mr. Reardon to be.
Lawyer Backus, of the defense, declared that there was no ground for suspicion against any one of the men in the jury-box. They had been selected only after the most careful and searching investigation, he said, and the prosecution knew all that could be known about every talesman who was called.
It was 9.10 when the preliminaries had been disposed of and Justice Bartlett told the counsel to proceed with the case, Mr. Shepard at once began his opening address to the jury.

He opened by calling the attention of the jurors to their grave responsibility in this case, in which the community was in this case, in which the community was so deeply interested, and the necessity of withdrawing themselves completely from any preconceived opinion, reasonable or unreasonable, which they had formed upon the case. The issue was to the greatest importance, not only to the defendant, but to the public.

All the prosecution desired was that the jurors should act as good citizens and with a complete sense of fair play to the defendant. The law imposed upon them the obligation to regard McKane as innocent until all the evidence had been disclosed and carefully weighed.

"The foundation of an orderly society," said Mr. Shepard, "is based upon a free and honest ballot. If there has been any plan or conspiracy to give the man any plan or conspiracy to give one man a power several thousand times greater than that of any other man in the community, it is a serious menace to our institutions, and it is time to call a in the Lee Avenue Police Court, Williams McAvoy Smith, of 463 Grove Institutions, and it is time to call a in the Lee Avenue Police Court, Williamsburg, Street, Jersey City, was this morning

The counsel then defined clearly what the charges against McKane were under the indictment. From Oct. 30 till the evening of Nov. 7, he said, it was charged that the registry lists had been inaccessible to the public, and that the election inspectors had refused to allow them to be seen, acting under the authority and command of John Y. McKane. The three elements in the proof that would be submitted to the lury, he said, would be first that the three election

Special statutes had been passed by which all moneys to be expended in the savernment or improvement of the town of Gravend went into the hands of McKane, giving him practically absolute power.

Further outlining the testimony to be presented for the prosecution, Mr. Shenard said that McKane's relations with the police force of Coney Island were of the utmost importance in connection with the registry frauds, and would be fully exposed. The names of Police Justices Newton. Sutherland and others would come up frequently, and likewise that of Capt. Hinman, showing how every means of authority was employed by McKane in procuring a violation of

Mr. Shepard then went into the discussion of the registry lists themselves, showing how those lists had been swelled through McKane' influence, and how he had controlled year after year nearly every vote of the town, and declared it to be the worst of treason against the county in which we live."

After this the counsel took up the Election law section by section, and tated that the prosecution proposed to show up every violation that had occurred at Gravesend during the last section. There was not merely a single riolation in concealing the lists of registration, but other parts of the law had seen disregarded as well, he claimed, by McKane and his followers.

Justice Bartlett had told him on the first day of the proceedings that conviction in this case meant ten years' imprisonment as the maximum penalty which the law could impose, and Mr. McKane could not regard this possibility in any other than a very serious light.

The Court intends that there shall be no delay in the proceedings, and for this reason Justice Bartlett has decided to begin the daily sessions at $0 clock, and at that hour he was on the bench this morning ready to go on.
